FAQs

"From plants, for plants"

Q: Is there a danger of overfeeding or "burning" my plant with this solution either used in the soil or as a foliage spray?

A: The simple answer is no, there is no point in which this product can become dangerous for your plant. Overfeeding will only result in a waste of the product.

Q: I sprayed my plant and its leaves fell off! What's happening!?

A: A key aspect of this plant food is that it may "purify" living plant matter. Since a plant may lack an efficient means of purifying itself of synthetic toxins, in some cases the plant is left with no choice but to discard the structures that house these impurities. But do not worry, if this is what happened your plant is alive! The plant will soon replace the lost plant matter with new truly healthy growth. It should also be mentioned that this is an extreme measure that only a few plants will go through. For the best chance to keep this from occurring, do not spray this product on to the plant within a week of using another spray or fertilizer that consists of any chemicals.
